Fourth of July

2 Tragic Accidents

Be Careful

This is one of America's choicest week-ends—two consecutive holidays when the Fourth of July falls on Sunday but we celebrate it on Monday.

Before we take off on the two-day outing let's say a word for the United States, for freedom at home and abroad. The Fourth of July, of course, is our national birthday. But it spells more than that to the rest of the world.

Actually, the Fourth of July marks a day for all the world when a self-governing nation was established—and made the establishment stick.

The French have a famous liberty day—July 14—celebrating the capture and destruction of the Bastille prison, marking the end of Bourbon kings' tyranny. But the French people didn't carry on so successfully after that.

That's what makes July Fourth important to all the world—Americans declared themselves free men, and proved that a government of the people could be made to work. Don't let's forget that—ever.

As our people take to the highways this week-end let us keep in mind the grim example of two local accidents occurring within a few hours of each other, claiming three dead and six injured.

Highway accidents still are a matter of drivers rather than machines. And they happen to the best of us. A single lapse produces tragedy.

Remember this holiday week-end to be cautious—even afraid. You have reason to be afraid on today's crowded highways.

Things That Make America Are Still Worth Holding Onto

By S. BURTON HEATH

One hundred and seventy-two years ago today the representatives of 13 poor, weak little colonies on the Atlantic seaboard took a fateful step. With hearts in mouths, "with firm reliance upon the protection of Divine Providence," they defied the greatest economic and military power of their day, and solemnly proclaimed their independence from Great Britain.

We of the present generation have grown to adulthood as citizens of the greatest financial and industrial power of all times. For the long haul, we suspect maybe we are also the greatest military power in world history. Right now we are the hope of western civilization for survival. Only our materials, our productivity, our wealth can save Europe from being pulled by communism back into the dark ages.

We have a right to be proud. This country has come a long way since 1776—so far that sometimes it is hard for us to realize the guts it really took for our forefathers to defy Great Britain and make good that defiance.

But in these days isolationism and selfishness are fighting a rearguard battle against the progress of enlightenment. Economic and political reaction are fighting a rearguard action against progressive liberalism. And it is a good time to remember that it was not just the sons of the American Revolution that made this the world's greatest nation.

Run through Who's Who, any directory of leaders in any business or profession, and you'll find that the bulk of the names never were on the Mayflower's passenger list, or for that matter on the rosters of George Washington's threadbare armies.

We have become the world's savior, civilization's hope, because within our borders immigrants and the sons of immigrants from every hamlet in the world have worked together toward those ends.

Our nation has offered freedom, democracy, opportunity. We can't yet say truthfully that we have offered them without regard for race, creed or color, in the spirit of the founding fathers' "all men are created free and equal," but we have gone further in that direction than any other nation has. And we have become greater than any other nation has.

Maybe that's only coincidence. But when things are coming our way is a good time to push our luck. Freedom—democracy—equality of oportunity. They're all our revolutionary forefathers asked in 1776. They're worth hanging onto today, and extending.

Negro Goes to Chair for Rape of 2-Year-Old

Tucker Prison Farm, July 2 —(AP)—Edward Pugh, 21, Little Rock Negro, died today in the Arkansas electric chair for the rape of a two-and-a half year old Negro girl last Dec. 3.

Pugh confessed his guilt as he walked calmly and unaided to the chair. He was pronounced dead at 5:03 a.m. A few hours earlier he had shared a huge "last meal" of his own selection with another convicted rapist, Mizzell Palmer.

Pugh was accused of seizing and violating the Little Girl as she played in front of a Little Rock church at which her father was a minister. The Supreme Court affirmed the conviction and death sentence. The governor's office said not one request for clemency had been filed in Pugh's behalf.

KILLED IN WRECK

Memphis, Tenn., July 3 —(AP)— Ben R. Horton, 40, was killed near here last night in a collision of two trucks. His death was the 17th traffic fatality of the year in Shelby county outside Memphis — three more than at this time in 1947.

Education Is Cheaper

It is said that the average cost of one day's education per child in the United States is 50 cents, while it costs $1 a day to keep a prisoner in jail.

U. S. Looks Over Draft Law, May Seize Mines

Washington, July 3 —(AP)—Government attorneys took a long look at the new draft law today to see whether it gives President Truman the power to seize steel company coal mines if next Tuesday's threatened strike occurs.

The steel firms squared away yesterday for what looks like a major tussle with John L. Lewis over his union shop contract with the rest of the soft coal industry. They asked the National Labor Relations Board to seek an injunction against the union shop provision.

The steel company mines produce one-tenth of the nation's bituminous coal but all of their output goes to fuel the steel mills.

Thus a strike at the "captive" mines would quickly become serious. Closing down blast furnaces and steel mills would shortly paralyze the auto industry and hundreds of other companies dependent on steel for basic operations.

The stepped up national defense program would be affected.

That's where Mr. Truman's new seizure powers fit into the picture. The new draft law says he may take over "any plant, mine or other facility" and operate it for the production of government-ordered materials in cases where the contractor has failed to produce on schedule.

This provision was inserted at the request of Senator Russell (D-Ga), but there has been no official opinion yet to its possible application to the captive mine dispute.

While the rest of the soft coal industry signed a new agreement with Lewis a week ago, effective July 1, the steel companies said his union shop clause would force them to violate the Taft-Hartley Act and they would not yield. They said they were willing to meet his other terms—one dollar a day more pay and an extra 10-cent tonnage royalty —making it 20 cents a ton—for a $100,000,000 a year pension and welfare fund.

Sparked by U. S. Steel Corporation, 18 steel and coal companies whose mines produce entirely for hungry blast furnaces, filed unfair labor practice charges with the NLRB.

They asked for a quick determination of the legal tangle they are in. That meant they wanted NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham to issue a complaint against Lewis and to seek a court injunction to keep the union and its leaders from forcing the union shop provision on them.

The commercial coal operators, perhaps thinking Congress will amend the act next year, accepted Lewis' argument that the new pact was merely an amendment of the old one and therefore did not conflict too seriously with the Taft-Hartley law.

The steel companies said they are posting notices at the mines that they will pay the extra dollar a day and the 20-cent welfare royalty. The signs explain why they did not accept the full contract.

This is open defiance of Lewis' hold on the miners. There was little doubt in the minds of government officials, however, that the diggers would stay away from the captive mines, unless there is a settlement before Tuesday.

Romanian Denounces Newport 'Society' as Impolite, Uncivilized

Newport, R. I., July 2 —(UP)— Mrs. Mihai Ralea, wife of the Romanian ambassador to the United States, denounced Newport socialites today as impolite and "virtually uncivilized."

Her criticism came after she, her husband and daughter reportedly were denied access to exclusive Bailey's Beach on grounds the ambassador is a Communist.

Mrs. Ralea, vacationing with her family at a swank Newport hotel, said she never had heard of the exclusive beach which is famed as a swimming ground for the social set and visiting diplomats.

"My daughter simply asked the manager of the hotel where she could go swimming and he said that Bailey's beach was the accustomed spot for diplomats."

She said she had not been aware that any member of her family was trying to obtain admittance to the beach until she saw an article in the papers saying they had been turned down as Communists.

"We are not Communists,' she said, "and we do not care for the wealthy people of Newport and have no intention of mingling with them."

The order banning Ralea and his family was said to have been issued by the executive board of Bailey's beach of which Robert Goelet of New York is chairman. The reported reason was that Ralea allegedly was seeking to join in social activities to obtain information of value to his nation.

Mrs. Ralea said they had no interest in the beach or Newport society and hoped the matter would be forgotten so her family could go to California and have an "enjoyable stay."

Hempstead Bond Sales Are Lagging

24 Meet Violent Death in Arkansas Within a Week

By the Associated Press

A rash of early-July violent deaths stood today as a grim warning for Arkansas to be careful in their outings over the long Independence Day weekend.

Through last night (Fri.) 24 persons had died violently in the state this week from automobile accidents and other causes.

And the Arkansas Highway fatality toll for the 184 days of 1948 reached 186— more than one a day.

The latest highway victim was Willie Webster Ray, 15, of Waldo, who was killed last night in a collision of his motorbike and an automobile near Magnolia. The automobile driver, Gordon Sanders of Magnolia, was arrested on an open charge.

Near Warren, a timbercutter, H. S. Phillips, 65, of Warren was killed when he was pinned beneath a falling tree yesterday.

Joe May, 27, of England was electrocuted while repairing the roof of a barn at Scott, s material he was handling touched a high voltage line.

McMath Tells of Plan to Build Roads

Little Rock, July 3 — (UP)— Thousands of holiday motorists were getting personally acquainted with Arkansas' worn out highways today as they studied a shiny new replacement plan advanced by Sid McMath.

The Hot Springs candidate for governor in a state-wide radio broadcast originating in Harrison last night — dumped squarely in their laps his proposal to issue bonds totaling $28,000,000.

"My position is clear," he said. "The decision is yours."

McMath's proposal, which other candidates have said would only add to Arkansas present $118,000,000 highway debt, was simple.

He would borrow money over a four year period in order to match federal funds.

The first bond issue, he said, would total $7,900,000 for 1949.

The others would be for $6700-000. The people would vote on each issue separately.

"If you are not satisfied with the administration of the monies obtained if you have not received a dollar's value for the money that has been spent, you will have four annual opportunities to reject further borrowing," he said.

The prosecutor said his plan, by utilizing current construction funds, would provide $20,000,000 annually for new roads.

And he added that it would not interfere with present highway funds which are earmarked for debt service, county and city turnback and state highway maintenance.

He defended his program as an expression of faith in Arkansas' future and attacked what he termed the pay-as-you-go-to ruin plans proposed by other candidates as an expression of failure.

Declaring that he is "unalterably opposed" to any new taxes, he asserted "highways today will produce dividends for today and for the generations of tomorrow."

McMath was the second gubernatorial candidate to place a detailed highway plan before the people. Earlier Jim Merritt of McGehee had advocated several new tax levies.

Horace E. Thompson advocates a pay-as-you-go program, financed by the highway users.

Meanwhile, Jack Holt's headquarters said he would probably reveal his program next week. Holt so far has limited his highway talk to a promise to "construct 1,000 miles of paved road without a bond issue or additional taxes."

Today the candidates were taking advantage of tailor-made crowds at picnics and Independence Day celebrations throughout Arkansas.

McMath visited Marshall, Shirley Clinton, Damascus, Quitman and was to end up at Conway. Thompson was at Harrison and Portia; Holt at Portia, Corning, Piggott and Batesville and James (Uncle Mac) MacKrell at Judsonia, Portia and Corning.

James (Uncle Mac) MacKrell also issued a statement clarifying his proposed road program.

He would pool the road machinery and manpower available to the state and counties for temporary use, and use current highway funds to buy the materials.

"Of the total highway revenues of $44,137,816 for the bond year ending March 31, 1948, $11421527 or 47.32 per cent is set aside for highway construction and maintenance" MacKrell's statement said.

"This is augmented by about $4,-500,000 from the federal government for the same purposes. In addition, the counties receive $4,-103,930 from the gasoline tax and other sources for highway maintenance and construction."

The gubernatorial candidate said if the machinery and manpower were availble this money could be used to give every county in Arkansas a road system "usable every month in the year" without adding "a cent to taxes or floating a dollar in bond issues."

She Bumped Out

Marilyn Hood, three-year-old, rests at her grandmother's home in Fort Worth, Texas., after a harrowing experience enroute from Arkansas. She fell from the back of her grandfather's truck near Prescott, Ark., and wasn't missed until the family reached Mt. Pleasant, Tex. (a distance of about 150 miles). The child, suffering from cuts and bruises, with her front teeth missing, was found in the early morning hours on highway 67 near Prescott by a truck driver.

Communists Lose 3 Seats in Finn Vote

Helsinki, July 3 —(UP)—Nearly complete returns in the Finish parliamentary election indicated today that the Communists would lose three of their 51 seats and would drop to third place behind the Social Democrats and Agrarians.

With about 1,240,000 of the 1,700,-000 votes tabulated the Democratic union composed of Communists and the Socialists Union was running third.

The unexpectedly speedy count at that stage gave the social Democrats 337,500, Agrarians 304,500, Democratic Union 245500 Conser-Party 107000 Liberals 36,000 and the remainder scattered among small parties.

With the count far along and little likelihood seen of any appreciable shift in strength, is seemed certain that the Social Democrats would gain one seat for a total of 9 in the new parliament, the Agrarians would go up from 48 to 50 and the conservatives would gain three to 32.

The Democratic union, or Communists, was losing three seats the Liberals two and the Swedish peoples party one.

The count was on a complex basis of proportional representation. Pre-election indications were that no specific trend would be set before Sunday and the final outcome might not be known for a week.

The tabulation was bearing out peristent forecasts that the Communists would lose strength, despite their campaign warnings that such a setback would affect the country's relations with Russia.

The returns showed that the Communists, Finland's strongest party when Premier Josef Stalin recently proposed a mutual aid and friendship pact, were losing ground everywhere except in Northwest Finland.

The pact with Russia was signed, but contained clauses which the Finns interpreted as guaranteeing their sovereignty and national integrity.

No Petition Can Be Added to State Ballot

Little Rock, July 3 — (UP—Arkansas' voters will have an opportunity to cash their ballots for seven legislative changes on the November general election ballot. No more can be added as the deadline for filing petitions with Secretary of State C. G. Hall was midnight last night.

One of the latest to file a proposed change was the state Republican party.

The G-O-P act would reorganzie state and county boards of election commissioners in order to give the minority party representation.

Other initiated acts would reorganize school districts, require that local option liquor elections coincide with regular general elections; and revise the state workmen's compensation law.

Three constitutional amendments — one filed by petition and two referred by the legislature — are also on the ballot.

The first, sponsored by Gov. Ben Laney, would take the state out of the property tax field. Another would permit the legislature to set up a system of voting registration should the poll tax be abolished and the third would remove the 18-mill maximum tax levy for school purposes.

Palestine Peace Plan to Be Rejected

Tel Aviv, July 3 —(UP)—Unimpeachable sources reported today that the government of Israel will reject Count Folke Bernadotte's proposals for permanent peace in Palestine.

Cabinet meetings yesterday brought out no difference in opinion over the rejection of the United Nations mediator's suggestions. But the left wingers differed over the formula.

The meeting broke up only when a bearded Jewish patriarch went throught the streets blowing a trumpet to proclaim the approach of the Jewish Sabbath.

Announcement of the rejection was expected to be delayed until next week. A 37-man provisional council of government insisted at a meeting Thursday on being consulted before any reply was sent to Bernadotte.

Quarters in a position to know, believed it unlikely that the government would turn down a proposal by Bernadotte for extension of the Palestine truce. The 28-day armistice was headed into its last week. Unless stop-gap provisions are made before then, the Arabs and Jews are expected to resume the war next Friday.

With the Haifa harbor now in their hands, the Jews could use extra time to build up their supplies of food, fuel and other non-military commodities. The latter category is excluded by terms of the truce.

Jewish sources here doubted that the Arabs would agree to an extension. They were believed to feel that every extra day Israel exists is an additional blow to the Arab cause.

Informants reported that the government found unacceptable at least two proposals by Bernadotte. They were described as intended to give Jerusalem to the Arabs and to restrict immigraiton to Israel.

Here and There in Arkansas

Fayetteville, July 3 (AP)— Dr. Harold D. Hantz will take over as chairman of the department of philosophy and psychology at the University of Arkansas at the beginning of the fall semester.

Dr. Hantz, whose appointment was announced by Dean G. D. Nichols of the College of Arts and Sciences, now holds a similar position at Oklahoma A. & M. college. He will succeed Dr. W. B. Mahan, resigned, at Arkansas.

Washington, July 3 (AP)— Kelly P. Gibson, Tulsa, Okla., has been authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission to intervene in its study of the proposed abandonment of the idle Missouri and Arkansas railway.

Gibson has said he has major investments in Arkansas which would be affected by the railroad's future.

One Tulsan who is associated with a plan for restoring the line, alleged the line had been "wastefully mismanaged."

An ICC examiner has recommended that the line be abandoned.

New Yorkers Would Hate to Visit the City and Visitors Would Hate to Live There

By HAL BOYLE

New York, July 2 — (AP)— So you're coming to New York! And you want to know where to go and what to do?

Well, relax. The best baedeker is an open mind.

Whatever you want to see on a vacation is here in the great heart city of America — or within reach.

The trouble is that the people who come here to visit say they would hate to live in New York, and the people who live in New York know it's a great place to dwell in but they sure would hate to have to visit it.

The folks from 48 states and many foreign countries who now call it their home are really nearer the truth. New York City can be swallowed slowly by a lifetime of steady devotion. But no rubber-neck tourist can know it by a quick gulpin.

So you can't expect to understand the greatest city in the history of mankind in a two-week vacation trip. The best you can do is nibble at its grandeur.

You can come here and see more for less money than any other city in the world. Or you can come here and throw money away like a madman — and see no more than you can in two dozen cities throughout America.

To begin with, you don't have to have any feeling of awe about its celebrated night life. The velvet rope you've heard about —the one that separates the sheep from the goats — is now largely a myth. If your suit is pressed and your pocketbook is on straight, you can get into the Stork Club about as quickly as a government agent.

The open sesame here is an open wallet. Where a $20 bill won't get you I don't know. I've never had any trouble with a $10 bill when I had one.

But the night clubs of Manhattan are like a thousand other night clubs throughout the land—smoky second-hand air and with a cover charge.

The real New York is a series of adjoining neighborhoods, each with a separate flavor that takes time and understanding to savor. You can't know the place without a lot of walking around — and a lot of talking with the people who live in and love his sprawling city.

You can stroll four blocks here, and it's as if you went from Maine to Florida. Or from China to Naples.

The best things cost nothing. Like a walk up Fifth Avenue, the most queenly thoroughfare ever built by man. For a dime you can still make the round trip ferry ride to State Island, and see the green glory of the Statue of Liberty and a splendid view of the busiest harbor in the world.

For a buck plus you can go up to the top of the Empire State building and see below you the wealth that Croesus never knew. Or for the same money walk with a gilded male guide through radio city, the most novel real estate development since the Garden of Eden.

Whatever you want in the wide world is somewhere here--everything but empty acres.

You can beat yourself to death with your own pocketbook in this vast city and make no impression. No man is rich enough to conquer it by his wealth, but it is still small enough for a poor man with character to build a resounding fame.

It is the easiest big city on the globe to get around in. A good man can walk around this fabled island in a day.

And that is the best way to see it. Just to knock around, from street to storied street, and absorb it like an undiscriminating sponge.

That is the only way to begin to know New York. Nobody really knows it or ever will. But you'll see more strange things and more strange people than you will ever afterward be able to remember or forget.

Ads don't fail to feed the pigeons. Some day they are going to inherit all this concrete.

Al Jolson and Wife Adopt Young Boy

Los Angeles, July 3—(AP)—Al Jolson has a sonny boy of his own now.

He and his youthful wife acquired 6-month-old Asa Albert Jolson through court adoption proceedings yesterday.

"He is just what I have wanted," exclaimed the mammy singer when he came out of court. "Isn't he wonderful," added Mrs. Jolson, the former actress known as Erle Chenault Galbraith.

The Jolsons said thay have had the baby boy since he was five days old.

The singer and his wife were married in 1943.

Probers for Reds to Look Over Unions

Washington, July 3 — (UP) A special House labor subcommittee said today that unions in the shipping industry will be the next target in its drive to smoke out Communists in the labor movement.

Chairman Charles J. Kersten, R., Wis., would not say what other unions were on the list but other subcommittee sources said the inquiry would continue until available funds are spent. And the subcommittee's budget, they said, is limited.

Kersten said the maritime investigation would begin as soon as the subcommittee finishes its study of CIO locals in New York department stores.

"Obviously we will go after the most flagrant cases after that," he said. "What we want to do is root out Communsit labor leaders wherever we can."

Recessing the department store hearings late yesterday, Kersten ordered them reconvened at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the federal building, New York city.

Subpoenas have been issued for 31 key figures in the unions which department store officials have branded as Communist dominated. Both left-wing and rightwing labor leaders were on the subpoena list.

Kersten said the hearings probably will last through Friday. Union men named by previous witnesses as left-wingers will be asked if they are, or have been, members of the Communist party.

"And if they refuse to co-operate, and answer legitimate questions of the subcommittee, I intend to have them cited for contempt of Congress," said Chairman Fred A. Hartley, Jr., R., N. J. of the full Labor Committee.

A former FBI agent, now a private investigator, told the subcommittee yesterday the Communist party a year ago claimed 11,000 members on Mannattan Island. He did not speculate how much the figure has changed in the past 12 months.

The investigator, Theodore C. Kirkpatrick of New York, displayed an "exact copy" of a party "control bulleun" dated June 13, 1947. It outlined an organization of 20 "sections" in New York county.

Of the total membership, he said it listed 517 persons as employed in the "distributive" industry or stores. The biggest section — 663 persons — was classified "students."

"Would you say these sections pretty well blanket key positions in New York's economic and industrial life?" asked Kersten.

"Definitely so,"

"Yes," replied Kirkpatrick. "Demnitely so."

Man Sentenced for Keeping Girl Prisoner

Fayetteville, N. C., July 3(UP) — A 43-year-old truck driver, accused of keeping a 16-year-old girl prisoner for 33 days, today began an 18-month prison road camp sentence following his conviction on adultery and fornication charges.

Norman Troy Beard admitted having sexual relations with Eula Mae Mason but said he thought she was 18 or 19 years old.

The girl, who had reached the fifth grade after 10 years in school, testified that she thought Beard would marry her when they were wandering through Southeastern North Carolina, sleeping in barns and outbuildings.

She said Beard abused and beat her several times and once cut her with a knife. Beard said he beat her only once, using a switch to make her go home. She refused, he said, and insisted that they be married.

Eula Mae was given 90 days suspended sentence for fornication and adultery and placed on five-year probation.

She appeared at a Negro farm several weeks ago asking for help and claiming she had just escaped from Beard, who she said had kept her prisoner for a month in Hoskins swamp.

Beard was arrested a week ago after a widespread search.

Ike Urged to Give Decision on Nomination

By JOSEPH NOLAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was under heavy pressure to issue a final yes or no today as the Ike-for-president boom assumed prairie fire proportions among anti-Truman Democrats.

One report—unconfirmed—had it that Eisenhower would issue a statement early next week to say flatly he is not available for the Democratic presidential nomination.

It was abundantly clear that only such a statement could stop the snowballing drive by many leading Democrats to ditch President Truman and give the nomination to the man who led Allied forces to victory in the European war.

Jacob M. Arvey, Chicago Democratic leader, revealed that he and other anti-Truman party members would meet in Philadelphia to work out draft-Eisenhower strategy on July 10, two days before the Democratic National convention gets underway there.

James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late president and Democratic national committeeman from California will attend the preconvention caucus and it was understood that New York Mayor William O'Dwyer and others had been invited.

Arvey, Roosevelt and O'Dwyer, it was reported, will urge chairmen of all state delegations to the national convention to attend the July 10 caucus and to keep their delegations unpledged until that time.

The draft-Eisenhower move also got a new boost in the South where rebellion against Mr. Truman has been raging since he urged enactment of strong civil rights legislation.

Georgia and Virginia Democrats meeting in state convention yesterday, called for Mr. Truman's defeat and jumped four-square on the Eisenhower bandwagon.

The Virginia convention formally instructed its 26-man delegation to the national convention to support the general. The Georgia meeting called on Mr. Truman to step aside in favor of Gen. Ike and voiced a hope that the general would consent.

In Washington, Sen. John J. Sparkman, D., Ala., once an administration stalwart said the South would try to nominate Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas for president if Eisenhower refuses. He said Mr. Truman had "double-crossed" the South.

"I don't think any president was ever more beloved in the South than President Truman" Sparkman said. "But when he brought forth is so-called civil rights program, the people simply felt that one of their own had gone back on them."

While the Eisenhower drums grew louder, george F. Allen, a friend of both Mr. Truman and Eisenhower, was reliably reported to be trying to get the general to issue a final statement on whether he would accept a draft by the Democratic convention.

Allen, a guest at the Eisenhower's New York home yesterday, refused to confirm or deny that he was on such a mission. All he would say was "no comment."

Both the White House and the Democratic national committee disclaimed knowledge of any effort by Allen to elicit a statement from the general.

Six Suspects Are Held in Fatal Stabbing

Tulsa, Okla., July 3 —(AP)— Six persons were held for investigation today in the fatal clubbing of an attractive divorcee and the brutal beatings of two teen-age girls and another woman.

Police Chief J. W. (Bud) Holinsworth said the 25-year-old man was taken into custody after one of the victims regained consciousness briefly and gave a short statement to officers.

Mrs. Ruth Morton, a 42-year-old divorcee, was found dead in her apartment yesterday. She had been badly beaten about the head and her body was partly nude. A police pathologist said she had been criminally assaulted.

Her body was discovered while police were investigating an attack on Mrs. J. B. Cole, 38, her daughter, Doris, 12 and Levon Gabbard 14 who was staying overnight in the Cole home. All three are in critical condition.

Holinsworth reported Mrs. Cole in a short statement, said "Sam did it."

The two separate attacks occurred in buildings less than five blocks apart. Three other fatal attacks on women have occurred in the same area since 1943.

The Doctor Says:

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.
Written for NEA Service

Outbreaks of illness due to food poisoning continue to occur from time to time. They are more common, of course, in countries with poor sanitary conditions, but they happen here as well.

Most outbreaks of so-called food poisoning are not caused by the foods themselevs, but by germs or poisons which have gotten into the food. A good example is an outbreak recently reported from New Haven, Conn., in which 61 persons developed nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea.

Find the Source

Any time an outbreak of this sort develops, an effort should be made to trace the source of the difficulty. In this particular case the people attacked had eaten in a single dining room. Although the germ responsible for the outbreak could not be discovered, investigation lead to the conclusion that the disease was spread by contaminated eating utensils.

Germs known as staphylococci are one of the most common causes of food poisoning. These germs are usually present on the normal skin and on many objects. When they get into food on which they can grow and multiply and are then swallowed, acute food poisoning is likely to result.

The symptoms of staphylococcal food poisoning usually begin to appear within three or four hours of the time of eating. Early signs include nausea, vomiting, cramps in the abdomen, and diarrhea. Most people who have this kind of food poisoning are extremely distressed and prostrated for a while, but they almost always get well.

Although there are many kinds of food poisoning, almost all of them could be eliminated if proper care is used in the handling of food, dishes are properly washed, and food is thoroughly cooked. Although most cases of food poisoning do not end fatally, a severe attack is the source of great misery to those afflicted.

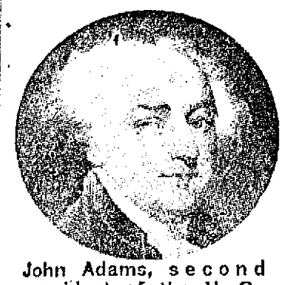

Note: Dr. Jordan is unable to answer individual questions from readers. However, each day he will answer one of the most frequently asked questions in his column.

QUESTION: Is a spinal injection given for operation safe?

ANSWER: Spinal anesthetics are commonly used today. They are better for some kinds of operations than inhaled anesthetics. In good hands they are quite safe.

Food consumption per person in the United States was virtually unchanged from 1909 to 1938.

'It's a Great Day'—And This Founding Father Knew It

John Adams, second president of the U. S., foresaw the reverence with which Americans would celebrate the Fourth. He wrote his wife that this would be . . .

Old John Adams could well qualify as a major prophet for his vision of what Independence Day would mean to Americans of future generations. With this year's Fourth falling on Sunday, we might well consider the state of the rest of the world and perform his "acts of devotion" in a spirit of thanksgiving for the preservation of the liberty Adams and the other founding fathers fought to bequeath us.

Truman Cabinet Discusses Red Blockade of Berlin

Washington, July 2 —(AP)— President Truman today discussed with his cabinet the Soviet blockade of the western zone of Germany.

Members, as usual, were reticent about talking to reporters as they left the hour-long session.

Jesse Donaldson, postmaster general, was asked if the Berlin crisis was among the topics discussed. He replied yes, but declined to go into details.

DOROTHY DIX

Dependent Aged Parents

Probably the greatest good fortune that can befall any human being is to live in a peaceful and happy home, where the husband and wife love each other and treat each other with tenderness and affection, where the parents consider their children a gift from Heaven and do everything in their power to give them every pleasure and advantage, and where, as the old cowboy song goes, there is never a discouraging word.

And conversely an unhappy home is the nearest approach to a hell on earth that any poor wretch can be called on to endure. It does not matter what a palace the home is, or how much money goes to its unkeep, or how many diamond tiaras the wife has, or how many cars the children have, if the husband and wife are always quarreling if the children have no respect or affection for their parents, if there is a perpetual row over whether Johnny should do this or Mamie should do that, and if the kids grow up without their mothers and fathers ever trying to understand them or sympathize with them, then that home is a place of torment.

Inasmuch as so many children grow up in homes where they are the victims of tyrannical and dominating parents and where the very memory of their youth is a horror to them, you wonder why, when they marry, that they take the chance of wrecking their homes by bringing into them members of their families who, they know, are nothing but fire brand.

Tyrannical Rule

To this column come innumerable letters from frustrated and bewildered wives who see their houses being pulled down over their ears, and their children driven to the streets for the privilege of a little freedom, by selfish and cantankerous old people who are determined to rule everyone about them, no matter at what cost.

One of the wives, who is facing the problem of whether it is her duty to sacrifice her husband and her children and her home to a disagreeable old mother, writes: "When I married I determined to make my home a happy one, because my childhood had been such a bitter one. And I succeeded. No home could have been pleasanter or more harmonious than ours has been. Nor more cheerful. My husband and the kids have been content to spend their evenings at home because it was more fun than stepping out.

"Now my mother has decided that she wants to come and live with us, and all this will be changed. She is very critical of my husband and I know how that will end—he will spend his evenings at the club instead of at home. She is always finding fault with the way I am rearing the children and they will escape to the streets to get rid of Grandma's nagging. She will try to rule us all with the rod of iron and instead of the peace and harmony and love and kindness that has prevailed in our home, there will be nothing but faultfinding and quarrels and fights and tears. Shall I let her come and ruin our home or not?"

I would say emphatically NO. No matter how mean a disposition a mother has, nor how hard she is to get along with, it is her children's duty to provide her with as comfortable a living as they can afford, but it is no part of their duty to a mother to let her ruin their lives and break up their homes. If mothers want their children to cherish them in their old age, they must earn the privilege by being lovable.

During the 16th century, certain English theaters met the popular demand for the unusual by putting on acts of madmen who had been borrowed from nearby asylums.

Unknown Ousts Favorite in Western Meet

Wichita, Kas., July 3(AP)— The Western Amateur Golf tournament moved into the quarterfinals today minus Marvin (Bud) Ward, the 1947 champion.

Dick Price, a comparatively unknown golfer from Wichita, ousted ward yesterday in the third round, 3 and 1.

Playing his home course—the 6,740yard par 71 Wichita Country Club layout—in regulation figures, Price was complete master of the Spokane, Wash., star who sprayed his tee shots throughout the round.

Price, Kansas amateur champion in 1940, was paired against Harold Paddock, Jr., of Aurora Ohio in the quarterfinals getting under way at 1:30 p. m. Central Standard Time (2:30 EST).

Paddock a former University of Southern California star, advanced over Jack Hines, Wichita, 1 up and young Dean Adkisson Wichita, 6 and 5, in second and third round play.

Robert (Skee) Riegel of Glendale Calif. had an important date with Warren Higgins of Dallas, a Notre Dame university student, in the quarterfinals.

Riegel, National Amateur champion, had to sink a long putt on the 20th hole to beat 18-year-old E. J. Rogers, Jr., of Oklahoma City 1 up in the second round, but came back to bounce Tom Stephenson Kansas City, 5 and 4 in the afternoon.

Sunday School Lesson

Bible Comment for July 4
By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

There are certain books, known as the Apocrypha, that were included in the "Authorized Version" of the Bible, the version that is most commonly used today, translated and issued in 1611 under the authority of King James I of England.

They have been omitted from the Old Testament as most of us know it. But they can still be found in many pulpit Bibles and in many of the large "family Bibles" that used to stand upon parlor tables.

The 39 books of our Old Testament were regarded as "canonical" by Jewish authorities, and they have been so accepted throughout Protestant churches. But the Roman Catholic Church at the Council of Trent in 1546 set the seal of its approval to 11 of the Apocryphal books, including them in the recognized canon.

To describe the Apocryphal books, or to discuss the issues concerning them, would be impossible here. But their chief and deep interest is in what they tell of the history and religious life of Israel during a great part of the 400 years between the periods of the Old Testament and the New.

It was a time of tragic happenings, bitter and ruthless truggles for mastery among those aspiring to rule, murders and assassinations, terrible persecutions and intense sufferings. But there are inspiring records of faith and courage on the part of those who dared to stand for their convictions and resist the powers that sought to corrupt and paganize the purity of the religion of Israel. That purity was manifest in the nobility and beauty that religion had attained during and following the exile in Babylon, as revealed in such scriptures as the latter portion of Isaiah, and in many of the Psalms.

The Books of the Maccabees, particularly, tell of that brave resistance to the Hitler-like tyrants and dictators of that ancient day who sought with ruthlessness to pollute popular religion with pagan ideas and practices. That the true faith of Israel was preserved is evident in the remnant of noble and faithful souls in the time of Christ, like Simeon "waiting for the consolation of Israel."

But the faith was preserved at terrific cost. In the persecutions, 00 Pharisees, then the sect of the most earnest and sincere, were crucified in one day. When worshipers in the temple protested against the profanation of its worship, soldiers were loosed upon them with sabres, and 6000 were put to the sword.

Yet the faith survived, and Israel has survived. The land of tragedy and glory is a land of tragedy again. What will the future bring forth? We may well say, "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem; they shall prosper that love thee." —(Psalm 122:6.)

THE SCOUTING TRAIL

A group of Hope Boy Scouts returned Wednesday afternoon from Camp Pioneer, near Mena. The group successfully completed ten days of intensified scout training there.

Bobby Martin of troop 58 completed the requirements for both second and first class rank and also earned swimming, metal work and woodwork merit badges. Bobby served at patrol leader in his camp troop. Scout Martin shot the highest and only perfect score, to date, on the rifle range. Martin received a nice prize which had been offered for the first perfect score. He shot 50 out of a possible 50 on a standard N.R.A. target at 50 feet from prone position. Bobby received his pro-marksman and marksman certificate from the national rifle association.

William Camp of troop 58 completed requirements for first class rank and earned merit badges in wood work and metal work.

Kirk James of troop 62 completed requirements for first class rank and did an outstanding job at the rifle range, receiving pro-marksman and marksman certificates.

Kenneth Brumlee of troop 62 completed the requirements for second class rank, and received his pro-marksman certificate at the rifle range.

Jerry O'Neal completed requirements for first class rank and earned merit badges in swimming, woodwork, wood carving, home repairs and metal work. Jerry also received pro-marksman and marksman certificates at the rifle range.

The group reported a very enjoyable camping experience.

Bitter Reprieve

THE STORY: Playboy Marcus Sterling owes Harry Bindle a gambling debt of $10,000 he cannot pay. His wealthy wife, Miriam, has refused him the money. He comes home late after dodging Bindle all day. Miriam is out. Bindle phones that he will be over at 11 to collect. Marcus is desperate. Miriam comes in, wearing her fabulous diamond necklace. In order to get her out of the library before Bindle arrives, Marcus gives her a doped drink. Keyed up, he speaks cruelly. Miriam, wounded, takes her drink to her room. At 11 on the dot, Bindle shows up. He demands the money under threat. Marcus, cornered, gets an idea. He goes up to his wife's room. Miriam is asleep. Marcus takes her diamond necklace from a wall safe. To make it appear a burglary, he also takes a sealed packet, then scatters things about.

VI

Harry Bindle was getting restless. He frowned at the whisky bottle, stubbed out his half-smoked cigar in the ashtray. He got up. He crossed to the radio and turned a dial to shut off the orchestral jangle. He looked at his watch. It had stopped. His beaded eyes swept the room. He discovered a small clock, supported by a slender white figurine, perched on a sturdy ebony tabaret against the drapes in the alcove. He crossed to it, saw the short length of cord reaching from the base of the tabaret to the folds of a drape. Neat, he thought. Then his eyes blinked. Twenty minutes of 12!

He strode across the room, went out into the hall, listened. He went to the front door and recovered his hat, pulled it tightly down on his head. He buttoned his coat and his hands sank into his side pockets. He walked briskly to the stairway, looked up toward the dimly lighted landing, listened. He heard no sound.

Bindle had gone up one step when he halted. Sterling was emerging stealthily from a door Bindle could just see beyond the head of the stairway. Bindle watched as Sterling pulled the door shut, cautiously without making a sound. Sterling was descending before Bindle, arrested by his surprise, had backed off the stairs.

"Anxious?" Sterling's tone was surly.

"I begin to think you was taking a powder," Bindle snapped.

Sterling ignored that, stalked into the library. Bindle followed close behind. Sterling jerked a hand into his coat pocket and dropped Miriam's necklace on the coffee table.

"Maybe you've heard about those diamonds," Sterling said.

"If they're what I think they are, yes."

"That's what they are. My wife's father gave her that necklace for a wedding present."

"The papers was full of it."

"Then I don't need to tell you what it's worth."

"A hundred grand, the papers put it."

"Right."

"Maybe so. I ain't in the diamond business. So what?"

Sterling's expression turned to something close to hatred for the man standing across from him. "It's good security, isn't it?"

"Oh, security."

"Certainly. What did you think?"

"I wasn't thinking, Sterling. I been waiting to hear what you had to say. Since your wife is willing to take you out of hock by putting up a hundred grand worth of diamonds, I'd say it must be her idea to give you ten grand in cash tomorrow so you can pick up the necklace. Right?"

"Not tomorrow, Bindle. I'll be away. Leaving just as soon as you go. You may have seen my bag already packed in the hall."

Bindle rubbed his chin against his coat lapel, peered narrowly at Sterling. "Not tomorrow, huh? Let's see. Tomorrow's Friday. Saturday's my big day. I got to have my money for Saturday. I'll give you till Saturday noon. This time at my office, Sterling."

Sterling's nerves were wearing thin. "Okay. Saturday noon."

"And a final word, Sterling. If you don't show up by Saturday noon, I'll have to use the necklace to raise cash. Understand?"

Sterling shrugged impatiently. "All right. I guess that's all."

Bindle's hands remained buried in his pockets. His eyes wandered about the room, came to rest on the wide desk in a corner. Then he glanced annoyingly at Sterling. "Maybe you would have a big envelope to put the necklace in. I ain't anxious to handle it."

Sterling stifled a protest. "Sure," he agreed gruffly, picking up the necklace. He went to the desk, found a long white envelope, and dropped the necklace into it. Bindle had followed and stood at his shoulder.

"Now seal it," Bindle said, "and write across the flap, 'Hold for Marcus Sterling.' Make it your regular signature."

Sterling frowned, his face flushed, his patient at the breaking point. But he sat down abruptly before the desk. "All right, if that's the way it has to be."

Bindle watched while only the scratch of the pen across the back of the envelope disturbed the silence. Sterling turned in his chair and handed up the envelope. Bindle took it with his left hand and slipped it into his topcoat pocket.

Bindle then waited for Sterling to get up and lead the way from the room. He had no intention of turning his back on an adversary with whom he had driven such a hard bargain.

At the door, Sterling asked, "Won't you want a cab? I didn't hear a car when you came."

"No, you didn't hear a car. I don't mind walking the last two or three blocks. Sometimes it ain't so good, Sterling, to let a cab-driver know exactly where it's taking you, or exactly where you came from."

Bindle had sidled through the door while saying that. He stood facing Sterling. "Saturday by noon," he said. He did not turn to go down from the porch until Sterling had closed the door.

New York, July 2— Wherever Bubblehead Wallace went in his sordid masquerade as a friend of the common man, the town reporters wrote frisky descriptions of the tailboard clowning of William S. Gailmor, the thief who wheedled the money out of the crowds. The fact that this gaping Mortimer Snerd, who was vice president of the United States for four year, selected a notorious thief to handle the loot for him and his party, is a reliable measure of his mental balance. The citizens may never learn what vastly greater lunacies he committed when he was not only vice president but chairman of the Board of Economic Welfare by Roosevelt's appointment. In that position, armed with special powers and sportected by an iron curtain of "security," he had a billion to squander and the power to ship to the household gods of his spiritual home the secret yeast which makes the atom bomb go boom and all the plans and formulae that other agents of the government couldn't keep out of his hands. He once told me that there was nothing he would not do to help Russia, and on that basis we may take it that whatever Wallace hd access to, Stalin has now. Agents of Congress have found evidence of Henry's generosity to Russia, but they have learned also that he had the mumbling cunning of a town butt and managed to conceal fact in well-designed confusion. We may never know all that he did or what happened to the money.

The false character of a compassionate and utterly generous mahatma, with insinuations of divinity that has been painted on Wallace by a few dreary Washington God-seekers of the corps of press club pundits ,is an alarming reproach to the publishers who let such fools run wild. There are not ten hournalists in the whole capital whose writing deserves the recognition of the byline, and none of the Wallace cult, living or dead, ever was among those few. Yet, by repetition of their proposition that here was a saintly asetic, they blew this bang-shaker full of the same gas that so expanded Hitler that he blotted out the God of Christianity, the sun, moon and stars, and reason itself.

It is an affront to intelligence to ask us to believe that Wallace did not know he had a thief for a tub-thumper at his rallies. But we can grant that Gailmor either ease, the Communists, having unshakeable suspicisons of one another in all fiduciary matters, undoubtedly watched him during the count-up and frisked him for forgotten Jack.

Henry Love, in the San Diego Union, gave an excellent description of Gailmor's work on tour with Wallace.

"Evangelistic methods were used by William Gailmor, Wallace's new York fund-raising specialist," Mr. Love wrote. "The total of collections was not announced immediately. At the climax of his talk, Gailmor asked the audience to take out $1 bills.

" 'Don't give them to the ushers,' he said. 'We want a demonstration here tonight. Stand up and wave the bills. We want a picture of the people giving in mass support. Wave the bills! Now, ushers, get those!' "

About the same time—this was in May—Charlie Chaplin, the stingiest man in Hollywood, was photographed at a Wallace meeting in Hollywood, waving a slip of paper described in the press as a check for $1,000. His current wife, his third child bride when he got her, was waving something which the captian described as a bill. She wore a mink coat. Not all of them get mink coats from Chaplin. One stage-struck kid got pregnant and then got the bum's rush out of Beverly Hills with a steerage ticket to Omaha and a showbox of station sandwiches.

For another phase of Henry Wallace's feeling for the so-called common man, I lead you to a tenement on East 49th Street, New York, and up four flights to a smelly, crowded two-room flat where a white-haired man lies on an iron bed. He raises the covers over his head to smother his cough. He is a T. B., a veteron of the first war, who hasn't been out of the house in years. His name is Jim Minnerley. His wife is careworn, tired and dressed in frayed, old, cheap stuff. She is just in from her work as hotel chambermaid where she gets $25 a week, and is stewing up something for their dinner. Mrs. Minnerley brought Jim back from the veterans' hospital a skeleton weighing about 80 pounds. She had the luck to find this little cell in poverty row and took it because at the fourth floor the sun comes in from the west in the afternoons until it drops below the high buildings close by. From her pay and tips she crowded Jim with milk and two fresh raw eggs a day until his weight went back up to past 100.

When Henry Wallace was sneaking around the Roerich cult on Riverside Drive, Mrs. Minnerley invested $1,000 in a bond on the 26-story lamasery promoted and erected by Henry's rich friend, Louis L. Horch.

Horch and the brethren in the cult solemnly announced that they were giving this booby-trap to the people of the United States. It happens, however, and they very well knew, that there is no such legal person as "the people of the United States," so without embarrassment Horch went to court and grabbed back the skyscraper for himself. He is still Henry Wallace's friend, confidant and partisan. He was planted in a key position in the Department of Commerce by Wallace with power to either let or hinder the shipment of anything whatsoever to Soviet Russia. He says he is poor but he still owns the skyscraper and has a summer place at New Canaan, Conn. Horch still lives in the lamasery on the Drive while Jim and Mrs. Minnerley exist in the East Side walkup.

Mrs. Minnerley has given me her $1,000 bond, a bank-note job in the yellow tint of our old gold notes. It isn't worth a dam.

I profess none of the knack of Wallace's framed thief in summitating the humane juices.

But I would be glad to accept and deliver to these victims any contributions that might be sent to me at King Features Syndicate, 235 East 45th Street, New York 17, N. Y. Dollar bills, lives tens, checks money-orders or change will be acceptable. I promise to see that the forgotten man and his wife, of the great lamasery deal, get every cent of the money.

Come on, as Wallace's tub-thumper said in San Diego, we want a demonstration. Stand up and wave those bills. We want a picture of the people giving in mass redemption of the phoney pledge by which the Minnerleys and other poor suckers gave up their savings to build a temple to a phoney god promoted by Bubblehead Wallace, which then bounced back to Bubblehead's pal, Louie Horch.

When the kitty reaches $1,000 we will formally deliver the phoney bond to Bubblehead with the compliments of the common man.

Harrison Has Lead in Detroit Open

Detroit July 3—(AP)—E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, dreading "Arkansas traveler" from Albuquerque, N. M. has been a sick man, but he's doing better today in more ways than one.

The 38-year-old Dutch, just recovering from a siege of virus-x, was all alone at the head of 60 survivors going into the final 36holes of the $15,000 Motor City open golf championship. And the way he's going, the rest of the boys will have to hustle to catch him.

Harrison admittedly was "feeling better and playing well." His 36hole score of 70-67-137 attested at least to the latter. It was five strokes under par of 35-36—71 for the two rounds over the Meadowbrook country club's hilly 6,676 yard course.

Right smack behind him were four topranking threats. Bobby Locke, Jim Turnesa, Chick Harbert and Johnny Palmer— all a single stroke away with 73s for the first 36 holes of the fourday test.

Harrison fired one of the finest rounds of the tournament so far to take the lead yesterday with a 33-34—67, our under par, three putting the long 17th for a six to miss a chance that local pro Harbert though "was a cinch for a 5." He had five birdies and 12 pars.

Firmly in the money picture were Stewart Skipp Alexander, husky North Carolinian from Lexington, and Airline Pilot Elmer Reed of Atlanta with three under par 139's amateur spectator Gene Dahlender of Atlanta and the veteran Ky Laffon with 140's.
